The report, “Climate Leadership in a New Era,” lays out a detailed plan for how the United States can transition to a clean energy future with the aim of becoming the world’s clean energy leader. The administration’s proposal comes in the wake of last month’s elections, which many see as a mandate for major action on climate change. It’s not yet clear what, if any, policies might materialize as a result of the report, which was created in response to widespread concerns about the United States’ lack of climate leadership, or as a result of those elections. But the plan, outlined in a 90-page report, leaves plenty of room for creative thinking, from creating American-based green technology to developing national clean energy standards to pushing for a more effective carbon pricing system. The report is co-authored by 10 federal agencies, includes contributions from other public-private partnerships and draws on the expertise of dozens of organizations and experts. The plan also seeks to influence and mobilize all stakeholders, including companies, investors, regulators, city officials and the public. At a White House event to mark its release, President Obama pledged

Version 1.02 (1 Jun 2015) Changes include improvements to synchronization between files, a new "clear all" command and other general fixes. Version 1.01 (5 Jan 2015) PSA Insert Text to SRT got some improvements. You now have the possibility to insert a single file, or to load a bunch of subtitle files, and to append to them. In addition, you can now access the folder with the file to be inserted. Version 1.00 (11 Dec 2014) PSA Insert Text to SRT is a simple application that allows you to insert custom pieces of text in subtitle files, at clear moments. It is able to read the imported files, to check the moments of text display and to insert the desired text at a selected moment, even if it causes line overlapping. You can easily append a single subtitle file or load a multitude of.SRT files and modify them at once. Once you inserted the desired text, you can assign it to a specific line, based on the line and time of selection. What's new in this version:

- Improvements to synchronization between files. The program now lists all loaded files at the moment you start up, in the folder where they were inserted. You can select each file separately and it's possible to select more than one file at once, if you wish to have the program copy/paste them all.
- If you want to append subtitle files, simply select "Insert to End" and the program will load the last file, which will automatically be modified.
- If you choose to append subtitle files, the selected line/time is assigned to the first subtitle and if
